Reel Reviews By DON ALLEN

We've beheld a lot worse bills, and we've seen a lot better bills than the Broadway cinema offering for the week. But we have never seen many that were very much worse, nor any that were very much better. So, on may judge from that that the week's film menu is running along on the rather smooth roadbed of fairishness Anyway, the films on for this week "The Young Diana" at the Rivoli; "The Valley of Slient Men" at the Rialto; "Dusk to Dawn" at the Capitol: "Kindred of the Dust" at th Strand; "Sherlock Holmes" at the Cameo; "Monte Cristo" at the 44th Street; "Nero" at the Lyric; "Human Jearts" at the Central; "The Pris oner of Zenda" at the Aster, and "Forget-Me-Not" at the Criterion. the latter half dozen holding over ans continuing long runs.

PASSING IN REVIEW

Peter B. Kyne's "Kindred of th Dust" is just as good a film as it was a story. After beholding the picture at the Strand yesterday we came t this conclusion, and we cannot think of a more praisier phrase in which t

The fact that the picture is based on another story of the "great out-doors" (whatever that may mean) need not keep one away, for it isn't that kind of an out-of-doors varn at The author and Director R. A. Walsh have seen to that. We enjoyed Miriam Cooper's portrayal of Nan, the Queen of the Saw dust Pile. In fact, we enjoyed "Kindred of the Dust" as a picture. And say of 99 44-100 per cent, of the films we have seen during the last twelve The Strand music as always well worth the hearing.

The praise agents did not, as we is marked some time ago, dwell in "The Valley of Silent Men," and so, when we meandered up to the Rinito yesterday we must have expected too much, especially from the "Silent" part of the title. We were disappointed—not so much in the flim, but with the utter lack of silence on the par of a couple of bobbed haired ones in row behind us. During the ur winding of the film we learned via the near-human talking machines that "Jessie's new dress is a fright." Mad short, yaknow! All outerdatesn
